

Privacy Policy
December, 2010

Semaphore Press uses the data that you provide to track payment rates for the publications offered by Semaphore Press. We use the email you provide to send you a receipt for payments that you make.

The credit card information that you provide is not captured by Semaphore Press. We use paypal to process all credit card payments. You can read more about paypal's privacy policies on paypal's website.

We currently don't do anything else with the information you provide. In the future we might email you with a questionnaire about your experience with using Semaphore Press or a particular book.

If we change what we are doing with the information we collect, we will post an update to this policy on our website.